A NOTE FROM OUR ARTISTIC DIRECTOR

Welcome to A Night of Rebellion.

I started Rebel Phoenix Theatre Collective because I was tired of waiting for someone else to tell the stories I needed to see. Stories that are messy and beautiful, queer and unapologetic, loud when they need to be and quiet when the truth is too heavy to shout. I wanted a place where people like me—people like us—could take up space without apology.

Tonight is our first big step, and it's terrifying. We're building this thing from scratch with nothing but talent, duct tape, and the belief that it matters. I've lost sleep, I've cried over budgets, and I've definitely had moments where I asked myself if I'm in way over my head. (Spoiler: yes.) But then I walk into rehearsal, I see these artists give everything they have, and I remember exactly why we're doing it.

This show is proof that something beautiful can come from chaos, that community can form in the cracks, and that art is worth the risk. Every person on this stage, every person behind the scenes, has poured themselves into this night. And if you're in the audience, you're now part of that story, too.

So laugh, cry, cheer. Donate if you can. And know that by being here, you've joined a rebellion built on love, truth, and a little bit of glitter.
